ABOUT

Racing and riding bikes has been a part of my life from a very young age. My father Eric Orschel was a local mountain bike race organizer, hosting large one day races in the late 90s and early 2000s, as well as a Thursday night weekly race, which is where I first found a passion for racing at age 9. Growing up in Ontario, I also loved hockey and enjoyed playing all the sports as a child and teenager. This contributed to a fairly late entrance into the world of professional cycling and focusing solely on the bike. I also pursued a University degree in exercise science and outdoor education at Brevard College in North Carolina on a cycling scholarship in fall 2017. This was when my interest and passion for professional mountain biking really took off. My time at school in Brevard really shaped who I am as an athlete and person today, being the most significant development period of my life.

Once I began training full time for cycling in 2018, I progressed quickly, racing my first world cup that year, and qualifying for my first World Championships (in Cyclocross) later that year as well as U23 Mountain Bike World Championships in 2019. From then on it has been a slow progression moving through the Elite ranks as a privateer, finally having a breakthrough season in 2025.

Aside from racing I am also a cycling coach, utilizing my university degree and passion for cycling to help the next generation of young racers develop and hopefully avoid making some of the mistakes I made as a younger athlete. For me, being outside, in the wilderness and in the mountains is why I love riding my bike. I also love the pursuit of excellence and finding my own limits, but it is the time outside and unique places cycling takes me that make me love the sport so much. When I am not riding my bike I enjoy hiking, canoeing, rock climbing, camping and mountaineering.

2026 GOALS

“To become a consistent rider within the top 20 of the World Cup XCO field, and target a top 10 result at the World Championships”

~Tyler Orschel
